The Dangers of Loose Clothing

When working in any type of facility with equipment, it is important to make safety a priority. While some dangers are obvious, others are often overlooked and can result in significant injuries. One example of this is working near moving machinery with loose clothing.

Whether it is an un-tucked shirt, a tie, an unbuttoned jacket or even loose shoelaces, these things can get caught in the moving machinery and pull individuals into harm's way.

In addition, loose clothing is at a greater risk of catching on fire while working near hot equipment. Loose clothing can quickly catch on fire.

Protect yourself – DO NOT wear loose clothing when at work especially when operating with moving parts machinery or in the kitchen. Always ensure you have the correct PPE on.
